Sustainability is "in": Countless companies pride themselves on their sustainable actions and are constantly bringing new sustainability labels onto the market – from stock funds to food to vacation trips. Sustainability has become important for positive brand image and is well received, but unfortunately the term has now become significantly worn out. This can be easily changed, because sustainability is an essential element in securing the future and is therefore much more than "just" brand perception!

For this reason, TROX has developed a correspondingly far-sighted sustainability strategy. The core of this strategy is to achieve climate neutrality by 2040 – and since this can only be achieved through many small steps, intermediate goals have been defined, which of course also have to be achieved.

What these are in detail can be found in the fourth sustainability report of the TROX GROUP, which is based, amongst other things, on the internationally recognised standards of the Global Reporting Initiative (GRI).
